2019, I feel, has a lot in store for us. As a nation on the move we are certainly witnessing several changes and despite seemingly difficult impediments, I firmly believe that these challenges will usher in resilient stepping stones to a more pragmatic future.

The political scenario is marshaling an interesting and ever-changing fabric of alliances before we cast our votes. And as the days go by, the economic scenario is teaching us not to live beyond our means. But whatever may be the temporary embargo created by a global meltdown, I strongly consider that as Indians we have the ability to accept change and adapt to new situations as part of our rich cultural ethos.

Through the annals of history India has accepted fresh ideas, fresh policies and fresh vistas that have upheld our strong values. Innovative thinkers have emerged to shower us with pioneering concepts and break inflexible rules. After every pillage new empires have been built. Our history is replete with the glory of great teachers and emperors who have set personal examples to steer the nation forward. Let us therefore look to the future days with optimism and confidence, tempered with introspection.
